Combining Worlds

The German cabinetry manufacturer SieMatic presents its Beaux Arts Collection, designed by Mick De Giulio, which combines materials, finishes and other elements to create distinctive and personalized compositions for the kitchen. Popular throughout North America, Europe and Asia, this collection is all about combination — it takes the traditional styles of doors and structural elements and adds contemporary worktops and steel pieces to create the best of both worlds. Shown here is the Beaux Arts Collection with a range wall featuring a sliding backplash panel, one of Mick's signature designs (not manufactured by SieMatic). Available at Kitchen Studio Kansas City.

High-Tech Hoods

Technology is everywhere, reaching across all facets of the home. The kitchen is now being conformed by technology with Siemens' avant-Garde multimedia hood that contains a high-resolution 17-inch LCD flat-screen TV built into a 36-inch chimney-style ventilation hood. Another mess the chef doesn't have to deal with is the wiring since it's concealed within the hood. This "ventilation with a view" is used above electric or induction cooktops and is controlled with a remote. It also plays DVDs and CDs. The sleekly designed hood diverts all the smoke in a quiet manner, leaving the chef to concentrate on more important tasks. www.siemens-home.com

It's Coming Together Nicely

A refrigerator that has five different climate zones is certainly a very cool invention. Liebherr's 48-inch SBS (side-by-side) 245 unit contains a built-in multi-temperature wine cabinet, NoFrost freezer with automatic ice maker and a refrigerator with ample storage space. The wine cabinet, located above the freezer, has two zones for storing wine at specified temperatures, and the LED light within it can be dimmed. The freezer and refrigerator were built to secure freshness, which is the ultimate purpose of the fridge's humidity-controlled BioFresh compartment — keeping food fresh up to three times longer. www.liebherr-appliances.com

Top It Off With...

Brass, copper, zinc and stainless steel panels; Italian Marmorino plaster for the central and vertical, narrow side panels; ribbed glass side panels; or eye-catching mosaic tile side panels. We're talking about the Zephyr Cheng Collection, Padova. Inspired by the beauty of Italian architecture, the custom kitchen hoods allow homeowners to do as they please with the decoration surrounding the hood. The wide front panels act as a 'canvas,' and with Zephyr's step-by-step video, panels can be 'painted on' in no time. Side panels can be added as well. Dealer locations include Portfolio Kitchen and Home, Kitchens by Kleweno, Design Source Interiors, Contractors Appliance, Kitchen Design Gallery, Factory Direct Appliance, Regarding Kitchens, Alexander & Ray's and Doolittle Distributing. www.zephyronline.com
