STYLE IN THE HOOD

Ventilation is a necessary element in the kitchen to eliminate odors and keep smoke detectors from activating. But now, more than ever, the hood is going beyond just function and becoming a dramatic focal point. From stainless steel and sculpted glass to custom colors and a variety of finishes, they're making a bold design statement in the kitchen. The Padova range hood by Zephyr, for example, features removable veneer panels that allow for instant customization whenever you have the urge to change things up. A variety of different panel designs, colors and materials are available, including stainless steel, ribbed glass, mosaic tile and copper.

Range hoods continue to get bigger, wider and more powerful as well. Why? With more burners, griddles and even indoor grills, the hoods need to accommodate a more expansive cooking surface. But who wants the added hassle of cleaning hard-to-reach areas or scrubbing filters? Vent-A-Hood's Magic Lung answers this call by trapping cooking contaminants and collecting grease in a housing unit that snaps apart for easy cleaning in the dishwasher or with warm, soapy water.
